IWMA to hold next Webinar Series in April 2021

Hamburg, 9th March 2021. The International Water Mist Association (IWMA) announced today that a third series of webinars on fire protection with water mist will take place this spring, on 15th, 22nd and 29th April 2021. Registration is free of charge.

The first event will deal with “Water Mist for Building Protection”, such as historic and high-rise buildings as well as social housing. The topic on 22nd will be “Water Mist for industrial Applications” and the series will come to a conclusion on 29th April when attendees will learn all about “Water Mist for the Oil and Gas Industry”.

The programme for the three events will be published consecutively, the programme for 15th April can be viewed on the IWMA webpage from today onwards. The registration process for all three events will start on 8th April. News updates will be available on the IWMA homepage.

IWMA general manager Bettina McDowell says: “A further series will take place either in October 2021 or January 2022. This very much depends on whether the 20th International Water Mist Conference (IWMC 2021) will take place in October or not. 2021 will again be a year during which nothing is certain, but we are flexible and will surely provide those interested in water mist with news, information and knowledge.”
