21st International Water Mist Conference – Conference Webpage online

Hamburg, 16th May 2022. As of today, the conference webpage for the 21st International Water Mist Conference (IWMC) is online. The event – which is being organized by the International Water Mist Association (IWMA) – will take place in Madrid, Spain, on 9th and 10th November at the Elba Madrid Alcalá Hotel.

A special highlight will once again be the presentation of the IWMA Young Talent Award. In 2022, this prize will go to the author of the best master thesis dealing with the water mist technology. In all, four young scientists have applied for the award. The submissions are currently being evaluated by the IWMA scientific council. The winner will be announced on 30th June.

From this point onwards, the schedule for this event will look as follow: The IWMA scientific council is currently evaluating the abstracts. Speakers will be notified about acceptance of their submissions by 16th June. The programme will then be published on 1st July. The early bird period – during which IWMA offers special ticket prices – will end on 15th September. On 4th November, registration will be closed.

Day one is again applications day and can be booked separately. Day two will mainly be dedicated to sciences and research. An exhibition will run alongside the conference.
